Twenty-One Genres and How to Write Them

by Brock Dethier

“My students connected with the book and many wrote it ‘was written just for me.’ Many felt for the first time someone really knew their fears about writing and could help them overcome these challenges.”

—Sherena Huntsman, Utah State University

Twenty-One Genres and How to Write Them is the perfect combination of genre and process, providing 228 step-by-step writing activities or “moves” to help writers get their work done with minimal pain. The book offers ways to plan, discover, organize, and develop ideas, so writers are never stuck wondering “What do I do now?”

With quirky, interesting-to-discuss examples, many from students, it can be used as a chapter-each-week process guide or as an inexpensive resource for writers in any field, and at any stage of development.

The book’s inviting, enthusiastic voice and endless suggestions make writers believe they can do it.

“It’s intended to help people, like myself, who suck at writing by giving genres and moves. The book breaks down things to make it easier. It actually seems really helpful.”

—A student who hates English and writing

Do you want to quickly identify which students need help? How early in a term would you like to know that?

Writers show their strengths and struggles long before the final draft. Their engagement in feedback and reflection indicates if they are on track to revise well. Instructors who tune in early can intervene sooner and more effectively.

Eli Review is a peer learning app for revision and feedback that helps instructors coach students’ engagement in write-review-revise cycles. Because Eli’s focus is on formative feedback, the system offers student engagement data relevant to:

- Noticing at-risk students earlier
- Identifying ways to coach students who most need your help
- Finding students who need to be challenged
- Finding students who can help others learn

Eli provides formative information for student success.

In addition to what we provide instantly, we also offer research support for instructors and programs. All data in the system can be exported, either by instructors inside the app or through custom queries, which we provide as part of our data services for institutional subscribers.
